

as hard for himself he could be well off. He returned home, bought a small farm and started to work for himself. He built a small home on the farm and on Dec. 15, 1897 he married Caroline Steadman in the Salt Lake Temple.

In 1904 he started in the creamery business and still continued to farm. He overworked causing the bone infection to return in his leg, but he continued to go around on crutches, even going to school the winter of 1908-09. The pain became so severe that he went to the hospital in September 1909 and was operated on, but still had to go on crutches. He couldn't work so he sold the creamery in December 1910.

In November 1910 he bought a home in Charleston so it would be easier to get the children to school as there was no transportation to school. Here he farmed and operated a dairy with the help of the small children, since he was still on crutches.

In the fall of 1915 he again went in the creamery business for about two years. He again sold the creamery and bought the Charleston Co-op in September 1917 which he operated until he built a new store building in 1922, called the North Mercantile Co. which he operated up until the time of his death.

In 1927 his wife died. They were the parents of five children: Nellie North Farnsworth, Alta North Johnson Childs, Amber North Lefler Mahoney, Mill H. North and Almada North who died at seven months of age.

William H. North died Aug. 31, 1935, at his home in Charleston.

GEORGE AND MARY HANNAH DAYBELL PRICE

George Price was born January 6, 1861, at Tipton, Staffordshire, England, the son of James Price and Ann Powell. Married

Mary Hannah Daybell November 29, 1883, in the Endowment House, later, on April 1, 1889, in the Manti Temple. She was born January 9, 1866, at Stavley, England, daughter of Robert Daybell and Agnes Ann Bancroft. George Price died on March 17, 1938, Mary Hannah Daybell Price died August 15, 1952.

George was the second child in a family of thirteen. His parents heard the gospel soon after his birth and began making plans to come to America.

They sailed from Liverpool, England, on the vessel McClellan in April of 1864. They came by train to Council Bluffs, where they were met by a party whom President Brigham Young had sent to aid them.

They arrived in Salt Lake on September 24, 1864, and together with the Powell and Payne families were assigned to locate in Heber.

These three families lived in one room with a dirt floor and roof. At night the other furniture was piled in the corner and beds were spread out on the floor.

In a few years, the Price family acquired farm land in Charleston and raised their family there.

Mary, as an infant, came across the plains in the Samuel White company in 1866.

At the north fork of the Platte River on August 16, 1866, her father, Robert, left the train to find game to add to their food supply and was never seen again. It was a great sorrow to his wife that they had to go on, not knowing what had happened to him.

Upon arriving in Utah, Agnes Daybell and the baby daughter, Mary Hannah, went to live with Robert Daybells' father and his family in Charleston, where in January of 1867 another baby girl, Katie Elizabeth, was born.

On November 29, 1883, George Price and Mary Hannah Daybell were married in the Endowment House. Later, on April 1, 1889, after a law was passed in Utah, they went with others and were married in the Manti Temple.

Fourteen children were born to this marriage. Three were dead at birth and eleven lived until April 1957 when the second son, George F. Price passed away.

The Price family lived on a farm in Charleston, where they held many important civic and church positions until in 1920 they moved to Phoenix, Arizona, because of his

WILLIAM H. AND CAROLINE STEADMAN NORTH

William H. North born May 14, 1870 in Mill Creek, Salt Lake County, Utah, oldest son of Hyrum B. and Prescilla Jane Blair North. He came with his parents to Midway when he was two years old, later moving to the south end of Midway called Stringtown. When the division was made between Charleston and Midway they were in the Charleston District, three miles from the town of Charleston.

When nine years of age, William received a bruise on his knee causing a bone infection which was very painful and stopped him from going to school. There were no doctors in the county at that time but the leg broke open and finally healed by itself.

When twenty-one years old William worked out for wages. The wages were poor, only about $15.00 a month, and the work was hard, so he decided if he worked
